Disagreements
Has is not auxiliary -> verb (Growth is in positions.)
Blanket is an adj
Since we don't consider aux verbs, we should also not consider adverbs (most efficient, least pretty)
I think more is a determiner
Are is not auxiliary -> verb (There are men in prison.) African-American is probably considered 1 adjective, rather than 2 More is an adverb in this case More is a determiner since it measures quantity and does not describe like real adjectives do http://partofspeech.org/determiner-explanation-and-examples/Added words like fiscal are not part of the speaker's speech and therefore not counted The other labeled adjectives are quantifiers (determiners). Nouns acting as adjectives
According to is not a verb -> preposition On average is an adverb (like generally) Some nouns acting as adjectives
Be and are are verbs in this case. More Has is a verb in this case. most Sentences cannot exist without verbs
Verified modifies Democrat; was is a verb mislabeled as aux
aux
Noun as adjective
aux In terms is a prepositional phrase repeated is not a verb -> adj. (constant can replace repeated) Labeled the aux will as verb Part-time describes job Unemployment modifies market aux Nouns can act as adjectives, but should they be treated as such?
aux
Fewer as adverb or determinant Drone as adjective? Or should it be noun?
Can not in this case is aux, but was mislabeled as a verb
Does hundreds of millions count as nouns or numbers?
Quantifier are determiners but not adjectives (https://ell.stackexchange.com/questions/120992/what-is-the-part-of-speech-of-quantifiers-adjective-or-determiner)
Aux For-profit is split into adp and noun instead as a singular adjective
Go public means become available so public is a verb in this case Cell and phone both modify number Like in this case is not an interjection, but a verb
